

AUTOMOTIVE NEWS ALL-STARS CEREMONY

THE ALL-STARS' NIGHT TO SHINE

Lithia Motors CFO Tina Miller, right, this year's F&I All-Star, along with Chrissy Taylor, Automotive News vice president of editorial operations

Last week, leaders from across the industry gathered in downtown Detroit for the annual Automotive News All-Stars awards ceremony. It was a night for the honorees and their colleagues, loved ones and friends to reflect on the challenges that tested the industry over the past year and the accomplishments that are propelling it forward. See the Class of 2022 at autonews.com/allstars.

Above, Cheryl Thompson, CEO of the Center for Automotive Diversity, Inclusion and Advancement, accepts her DE&I All-Star award. At left, the All-Stars celebrate after delivering their acceptance speeches.

Keith Robertson, Toyota Motor North America's group vice president of supply chain management, is the operations executive All-Star.

Dan Quintanilla, director of talent acquisition at Gentex Corp., accepts his talent acquisition award.

Above, the Detroit Athletic Club was the scene of the event. At left, dealership fixed ops All-Star Eric Barbosa, center, managing partner of Henson Brand Dealerships, with Automotive News Executive Editor Jamie Butters, left, and Dennis Ephlin of All-Stars sponsor Capgemini

PHOTOS BY REBECCA COOK